LAKE TOYA
Excalibur, King Arthur's sword. There are many theories about its origin, such as Arthur pulling it out of a stone, or the Lady of the Lake bestowing it upon him.

DITSHICK TRANSLATIONS

Fucking up your favorite doujinshi since CURRENT YEAR

Artist: Sakurada Tomo
Scans: D-Morning (digital release)

We've reached the conclusion, but hopefully not the final chapter.

TL Notes:

Pg. 4 - The "Lake Toya" inscription on the wooden sword is a reference to the Gintama series - the protagonist Gintoki also wields a souvenir wooden sword from Lake Toya.

Pg. 6 - It is not specified who the enemy is; it only says "enemy" (敵).

Pg. 7 - Hanzu is a copyright-friendly stand-in for Hanzo, a chef knife company. Its name references the legendary samurai Hattori Hanzo. Judging by Amazon results, OL got a great deal - they normally range around 10,000 yen.

Pg. 8 - Potatoes first came to Britain in the late 16th century, whereas peas and other similar legumes have been a staple crop throughout Europe for millenia.
